Resilience

Most people think of resilience as a reaction to the threats of natural disasters. They think of earthquakes, tsunamis and floods. They think of safety and clean up, not the economy.

What We Need Them to Think About

Long after the clean up from a disaster ends, the economy still suffers, but it doesn't have to be this way.

We can put policies and structures in place to mitigate the effects natural and financial disasters have on our economies. That is what we are here to do! Our CPW Team will work with you on this over the next several months.

UO IPRE Project Objectives (Now-June)

Strategic Economic Resilience

→ Develop recommendations for how to incorporate resilience into the updated CEDS.

Local Level Resilience

→ Develop actionable, prioritized strategies in several CWEDD communities that will contribute to their economic resilience.

UO IPRE Roles

What We Will Do:

Outcomes:

Interviews and background research →	Find best practices
Priorities workshop →	Identify CWEDD priorities
Synthesize CWEDD priorities →	Create CEDS Evaluation Tool
Culminate best practices, interviews, and content analysis →	CEDS Resilience & Evaluation Recommendations Memo
Present an Economic Resilience community workshop series →	Develop a summary of local level priorities and actions, and workshop template

Advisory Group

Your Role:

- Determine economic resilience priorities to incorporate into CWEDD's economic development strategy via the CEDS
- Recommend changes to CEDS's that will better support economic resilience

Recommendations will ultimately go to the CWEDD Board and Staff to make the final decision on what's included in the CEDS update

Your Responsibilities (March - April):

- Meet with the UO IPRE team 3-5 times
- Engage in a short interview with a UO IPRE team member about strategic economic resilience in CWEDD
- Provide written feedback periodically on draft recommendations created by the UO IPRE team
